

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Fares al-Braizat is currently finalizing a Ph.D. thesis at the Department of Politics and International Relations, University of Kent at Canterbury, U.K., on Islam, Modernisation, and Democratic Values in the Middle East. He is also an affiliated researcher to the Centre for Strategic Studies at the University of Jordan, Amman, Jordan, which is the collaborating institution for the World Values Survey in Jordan.

Gabriela Catterberg graduated from the Ph.D program on political science at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor in 2002. She also worked from 1997 to 2002 as Ronald Inglehart's research assistant in the World Values Surveys Project at the Institute for Social Research. Currently in Buenos Aires, Argentina, she is involved in research projects with the Universidad Di Tella and also does political consulting.

Pradeep Chhibber is an associate professor of political science and holds the Indo-American Community Chair in India Studies at the University of California at Berkeley. He is the author of Democracy Without Associations (University of Michigan Press 1999), and is currently working with Ken Kollman of the University of Michigan on the evolution of national party systems in Britain, Canada, India, and the United States. Pradeep has an MA and an M.Phil from the University of Delhi and received his Ph.D. from UCLA.

Ronald Inglehart is a professor of political science and program director at the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan. He helped found the Euro-Barometer surveys and directs the World Values Surveys. His research deals with changing belief systems and their impact on social and political change. His most recent books are Modernization and Postmodernization: Cultural, Economic and Political Change in 43 Societies (Princeton: Princeton University Press 1997) and Human Values and Beliefs: A Cross-Cultural Sourcebook (Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press 1998); and (with Pippa Norris) Rising Tide: Gender Equality in Global Perspective (Cambridge University Press 2003). Author of over 170 publications, he has been a visiting professor or visiting scholar in France, Germany, The Netherlands, Switzerland, Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Brazil and Nigeria and has served as a consultant to the U.S. State Department and the European Union. For more information, see Inglehart's website: <http://wvs.isr.umich.edu/ringlehart/index.html>.

Patricia Méndez is a student of political science at the Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de México, ITAM, and Research Analyst at newspaper Reforma, in Mexico City.

Alejandro Moreno is professor of political science at the Instituto Tecnológico

Autónomo de México, ITAM, and Head of the Department of Survey Research at Reforma newspaper, both in Mexico City. He is the author of Political Cleavages: Issues, Parties, and the Consolidation of Democracy (1999), and co-author of Human Values and Beliefs: A Cross-Cultural Source-Book (1998). Moreno is co-investigator of the World Values Survey in Mexico. He received his PhD from the University of Michigan in 1997.

Renata Siemienska is professor and chair of the Department of Sociology of Education, Warsaw University; director of the Institute for Social Studies of the Warsaw University and head of the Interdisciplinary Research Division of Gender Studies at the Institute; and she is the chairholder of the UNESCO Chair “Women, Society and Development,” Warsaw (Poland). She has lectured as visiting professor in several American and Canadian universities and served as president of the UN International Research and Training Institute for the Advancement of Women (INSTRAW), as expert of UN, UNESCO, and the Council of Europe. She has published several books and essays on comparative cross-national value systems, ethnic relations, women’s public participation and socialization. Among her recent publications are her edited books: Portraits of Women and Men in Mass Media and School Textbooks (1997) and Education at the time of Globalization (2001). Her other books include, Women and Men in Elites. Cross-National Study (1999), They Do Not Have Opportunities, They Do Not Want, They Are Unable, Do They? About Attitudes and Women's Political Participation in Poland (2000).

Farooq Tanwir is an assistant professor in the department of Rural Sociology at the University of Agriculture, Faisalabad, Pakistan. He received his Ph.D. from the University of New England, Australia in the year 2000. His research focuses on cultural shifts in Pakistani values.

Mark Tessler is Samuel J. Eldersveld Collegiate Professor of Political Science at the University of Michigan. His recent books include Area Studies and Social Science: Strategies for Understanding Middle East Politics; Democracy and Its Limits: Lessons from Latin America, the Middle East and Asia; and Democracy, War and Peace in the Middle East. Tessler’s current research deals with the attitudes of ordinary citizens in the Middle East toward issues of peace, democracy, religion, and gender. Recent reports of this research appear in Comparative Politics, World Politics, Journal of Conflict Resolution, and International Studies Quarterly.

Christian Welzel is associate professor of political science at the International University Bremen (IUB). He is a member of the Steering Committee of the World Values Surveys Association. He is an author of more than 40 publications.

His recent book is Fluchtpunkt Humanentwicklung: Die Grundlagen der Demokratie und die Ursachen ihrer Ausbreitung [Focus Human Development: The Foundations of Democracy and the Causes of Its Expansion] (Opladen: Westdeutscher Verlag, 2002). His recent article is (with Ronald Inglehart and Hans-Dieter Klingemann) "The Theory of Human Development: A Cross-Cultural Analysis." European Journal of Political Research 42(2), forthcoming.