

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Adekeye Adebajo is Executive Director of the Centre for Conflict Resolution at the University of Cape Town, South Africa. Between 2001 and 2003, he was the Director of the Africa Program at the International Peace Academy in New York and Adjunct Professor at Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs (SIPA). He served on United Nations missions in South Africa, Western Sahara, and Iraq. He is the author of Building Peace in West Africa: Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Guinea-Bissau; Liberia's Civil War: Nigeria, ECOMOG, and Regional Security in West Africa; and co-editor (with Chandra Sriram) of Managing Armed Conflicts in the Twenty-First Century.

Dorina A. Bekoe is an associate with the Africa Program at the International Peace Academy. She received a doctorate in public policy from Harvard University in June 2002. Her current research is on factors that determine the successful implementation of peace accords.

Tatiana Carayannis is completing a doctoral dissertation on Conflict Networks and International Organizations: The Congo Wars, 1996-2003 at the Department of Political Science at The Graduate Center of The City University of New York. She also manages the oral history and publication series research of the United Nations Intellectual History Project, based at the Graduate Center's Ralph Bunche Institute for International Studies. Her publications include research on the Democratic Republic of Congo, the theory and practice of conflict resolution and irregular forms of war, and the role of ideas at the United Nations. She has lived in Central and West Africa, and resides in New York City.

Harvey Glickman is Professor Emeritus of Political Science at Haverford College in Pennsylvania, where he served as Director of African Studies and Coordinator of Peace Studies for Haverford and Bryn Mawr Colleges. He has degrees from Princeton and Harvard; he has also studied at Oxford University and London School of Economics; and he has taught at Harvard, Princeton, Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Dar es Salaam University, University of Cape Town, University of Pennsylvania, University of California-Berkeley, and Lincoln University, Pennsylvania. He has written numerous articles, essays, reviews and parts of books on African politics, and he has consulted for the RAND Corporation, the American Friends Service Committee, U.S. Department of State, USAID, the Defense Intelligence Agency, and the Defense Intelligence College. His books include Ethnic Conflict and Democratization in Africa (ASA Press 1995); Political Leaders of Contemporary Africa South of the Sahara (Greenwood 1992); Toward Peace and Security in Southern Africa (Gordon and Breach 1990); The Crisis and Challenge of African Development (Greenwood 1988); The Problem of Internal Security in Britain (with H.H. Wilson, Doubleday 1954). He has served as Secretary of the American Political Science Association, book review editor of Africa Report and editor of ISSUE - A Journal of Opinion (African Studies Association). His most recent work centers on ethnopolitical conflict in Africa and institutional reconstruction.

Rose M. Kadende-Kaiser is a Research Analyst at Geneva Global, Inc. in Radnor, Pennsylvania and Visiting Scholar at the African Studies Center at the University of Pennsylvania. Before joining Geneva Global, she was affiliated with the Solomon Asch Center for the Study of Ethnopolitical Conflict at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Kadende-Kaiser also taught in the Department of Anthropology and was the Director of the Women's Studies Program at Mississippi State University. Her research interests include gender and conflict in Africa, with a particular focus on the Great Lakes region. She has work on projects with the Social Science Research Council, the International Peace Academy, the United States Institute of Peace and the United Nations University.

Paul J. Kaiser is the Associate Director of the African Studies Center and Adjunct Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania. Before joining the University of Pennsylvania in 2000, Dr. Kaiser taught at Mississippi State University. His research focuses on African politics, with particular expertise in East and Central Africa. He served as an election observer for the 1995 elections in Tanzania for the International Foundation for Elections Systems, and he has worked on projects with the Ford Foundation, International Peace Academy, and the United States Institute of Peace.

Abdul Rahman Lamin is a Post-Doctoral Research Scholar at the Centre for Africa's International Relations at University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa. Prior to that, Dr. Lamin was a Visiting Fellow at the Solomon Asch Center for Study of Ethnopolitical Conflict at University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia. Dr. Lamin specializes in peacebuilding and transitional justice in the Mano River Union sub-region of West Africa. Educated in Sierra Leone and the United States, he earned his Ph.D. from the Department of African Studies and Research at Howard University in Washington, D.C.

Benjamin Talton is assistant professor of African history at Hofstra University in Hempstead, New York. He earned his BA from Howard University in 1996 and his Ph.D. in history from the University of Chicago in June 2003. His dissertation is titled "Ethnic Insurgency and Social Change: A History of the Konkomba of Northern Ghana." He is continuing his research on Konkomba history, focusing on self-help and community development initiatives generated from within Konkomba communities between the 1920s and 60s. Most recently, he is the author of "'Pito to Eat and Food to Drink': Education, Local Politics and Self-Help Initiatives in Northern Ghana, 1945-1972," Transaction of the Historical Society of Ghana (forthcoming, 2003).

Beth Elise Whitaker is assistant professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. She conducted field research in Tanzania from 1996 to 1998 and earned her Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1999. Her research focuses on refugee and security issues in Africa. She worked previously for an international project of the American Council on Education and has conducted research for the Brookings Institution, the UN Foundation, Save the Children Fund, CARE, and the U.S. Institute of Peace.